William Kirby Lockard (1929 – 2007)

William Kirby Lockard received a Bachelor of Architecture degree in 1952 from the University of Illinois. That same year, he moved to Tucson where he joined the firm of Scholer, Sakellar, and Fuller. He then pursued a Master of Architecture degree at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, graduating in 1962. Returning to Tucson, he began his teaching career at The University of Arizona.

A nationally recognized architect, professor, author, artist, and city planner, Kirby touched the lives of many students who themselves became renowned design professionals. His books include Drawing as a Means to Architecture, Design Drawing, Design Drawing Experiences, Freehand Perspective for Designers, and Drawing Techniques for Designers. Kirby lectured at more than 25 universities in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, and Mexico.

Kirby's architectural accomplishments have been highly recognized. In 1969, he received the Regional Award of Merit from the American Institute of Architects for his design of Dove of Peace Lutheran Church in Tucson. In 1976, he received The University of Arizona's Creative Teaching Award and was acknowledged as one of the top teachers of architectural graphics in the United States. In 1977, Kirby was invested as a Fellow in the AIA and in 1981 received the AIA Western Mountain Region's highest award. Kirby Lockard was the founder of the Design Communication Association.

Together with his wife Peggy, he traveled extensively visiting Canada, Mexico, Great Britain, continental Europe, Egypt, Greece, Australia, and New Zealand.

Kirby and Peggy Lockard are members of the President's Club at The University of Arizona and have donated numerous scholarships to CALA.
